The tramp still lingered, when he was joined by the other tramp still lingering about the door. Unluckily the pistol wasn't loaded. One tramp entered the unlocked back door while the other occupied Mrs. Jewett's attention at the front door. She was alone in the house all the time. She has now got that pistol loaded.

MISSISSIPPI DOINGS.

[From the Boston Journal.]

We suppose, now that the elections are over, that we can discuss the way matters have been going on for some time in Mississippi without subjecting ourselves to the charge of waving the "bloody shirt." We have already made some extracts from the letters of the Mississippi correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial—a well informed man, who does not appear to be particularly Republican in his politics. He is, however, a friend of equal rights and of the observance of the laws. He maintains that there has been for some months a substantial reign of terror in large sections of Mississipi, that is, wherever terrorizing is necessary to break down the spirit of the colored voters and to secure Democratic supremacy. His conclusion, arrived at from conversation with a great many Democrats, has been that the Democratic leaders were bound to carry the State, without the least regard to the actual Republican majority. Indeed he has said that the larger that majority the more sure it is to be overcome, for it only arouses the desperation of those who wielded the Ku-Klux arrows of terror a few days and are ready for anything rather than to accomplish their designs.

Another correspondent, writing from Jackson, Miss., fully corroborates the views. He states that three counties in Mississippi—Yahoma, Yazoo and Pascola—are minus their chief executive officers, Brown, Morgan and Greene being fugitives from their respective counties, and afraid to yet assert their lawful duties as sheriffs on account of the openly-expressed threats made against their lives. The steadfast compact between Gov. Ames and leading planters—of which such a flourish has been made in the papers—by which the planters bound themselves to maintain the peace of the community, if the Governor would forbear to carry out his plan of arming the colored militia, has amounted to nothing, because it took out of the Governor's hands all means of self-defence on the part of the law-abiding portion of the State. With the Governor thus rendered powerless, the Democratic leaders had everything their own way, and that that way was not at all consistent with the maintenance of the rights of all voters on the ground of law is not only to be inferred from the nature of things but is apparent from the avowals of the local Democratic press. We make a few pertinent extracts:

"Let every Democrat be at least five men present at challengers. Have it understood that they will be present until the last vote is counted. And then accompany the box to the county seat to see that the proper return is made."

"Hang the Registrar that proposes to throw out a Democratic vote or a Democratic box."

"Hang the Inspector of Election that proposes to cheat you out of the victory by throwing out your votes."

"The victory is already won. If an attempt is made to throw out Democratic votes hang the man that loses it."

"Break the line that may be packed—and be pelt to keep you from voting, or make the man who attempts to vote or assisting or hiring out your vote after dark more than they will profit them, and will undo for the South much of the good which it has attained during the past three or four year.—N. Y. Times."

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

The friends of Secretary Robeson claim that the Republican majority in the New Jersey Legislature will make him United States Senator.

It rather disproves the Democratic theory of the penal thieves reducing the party majority in New York that the great Republican gains were in counties which had nothing to do with the canals.

The Providence Press says: "Massachusetts Democrats thought they saw their ship coming in Tuesday afternoon, but when they woke up Wednesday morning she was full down on the horizon."

Even the New York Tribune, which tries to slur over the significance of most of Tuesday's elections, admits that "in Pennsylvania the Republicans got on the right side, and have won an honest victory for hard money."

The New York Herald says: "The Republicans control States enough to enable them to elect the next President, with the aid of New York, and the result of Tuesday's voting is not such as to take New York out of the list of debatable States next year."

A despatch from the Springfield Republican office to the Philadelphia Press on the night of the election, seasoned its unpleasant returns with the remark: "The result has little or no significance." Philosophical as the old antediluvian who said there would be "not much of a shower."

The Omaha Herald is issued about 1,230 miles from the little room in which President Grant and his Cabinet assemble. Yet, with an immense telescope to assist sight, and with ears already long to catch sound, the astounding fact is discovered by the editor that Chandler is a roaring "third termer," said that three Presidential candidates sit at that council board, viz Grant, Jewell and Bristow. The two latter, of course, are looking furtively at Chandler—in fact, his presence inspires mortal terror. What a happy thing it is to live about sixty hours away from Washington by rail, and, if news we desire don't come instantly, to have a fertile imagination, and invent a roaring lion which will answer just as well.—Washington Chronicle.

The good people of Prince Edward Island take considerable pride in their young men, whom they consider average pretty well, but whenever get hold of such a fellow as this that told of by the Summerside Progress, they get right up and brag: "The young man Chappell, O'Leary road, who fell from a hay stack, and being run through the body by a pitchfork, was given up by the surgeons, is recovered and is walking about. A year or two ago, while chopping in the woods, a tree fell on him and pinned him to the ground for several hours, on which occasion he was fatally injured. Some time before he fell down the hatchway of a mill and was taken up for dead. Earlier he was thrown from a swing, and was supposed to be killed, and, it is said, he was once drowned. Chappell is a slight young man of nineteen or twenty years of age."

THE TRUE STORY OF MARY AND HER FAMOUS LAMB. A writer in the Springfield Republican has had a pleasant interview with the real Mary who had the little lamb, and who related to him the incidents on which the immortal poem was based. The lamb was a twin, thrust out of the pen by its unnatural mother. Mary took it home and nursed it until well, and it naturally grew into a great pet. One morning when it was to go as usual to pasture it could not be found, and when Mary went singing on her way to school it followed her, to the school house door she picked it up and managed to carry it secretly to her desk, where she covered it up with her shawl. But when called out to her spelling class the lamb got up too, and came pattering after her, which made the children laugh so to see a lamb at school. It happened on that morning that a young man named John Rowlston, the son of a riding master in Boston, who was fitting himself for Harvard was at school, and a few days after produced three verses of the poem. How it ever came to be published Mary did not know, for the young man died soon after, ignorant of the immortality of his verses. But the lamb lived and had five lambkins before it met its death by an surgery cow. Aside from its memory there yet remains of it, the rea due of a child's stocking, which is gradually unraveling to furnish memories for the many friends of Mary and her little lamb.

The Louisiana Intelligencer, of Monroe, La., is out with a challenge we should like to see answered for the benefit of the bigots both North and South who are forever howling about "carpet baggers." It says: "All Democratic papers in the state make frequent mention of the carpet-baggers, but seldom define the meaning of the term or give the names of the persons thus styled. Now we ask for something definite. Let every Democratic paper publish the names of the carpet-baggers, in their respective parishes. We ask this especially in the Fifth District. Let the public and the country know who they are and where they stay. We venture to predict that when the list is complete, it can be shown that these carpet baggers have lived in the State from four to ten years, and own more real estate and pay more taxes than all the Democratic editors who denounce them. Give us the names, if you dare."

The statue of William Penn which is to surmount the public buildings in Philadelphia, represents him as he was at the age of about thirty-eight, the face taken from the original painting presented to the Historical Society of Pennsylvania by his grandson, Granville Penn, and the figure corresponding to Dixon's description: Erect in stature, every motion indicating honest pride; in every limb and feature the expression of a serene and manly dignity. The costume, about which there has been some conflict, was finally settled by a committee of the Historical Society upon the report of Mr. George Harrison Fisher, and is to be the same as was in vogue during the last years of the reign of Charles II., the date of Penn's first visit to this country.

The Press says Lydia L. A. Perry of Salem, didn't attend the meeting of the Portland, Saco & Portsmouth railroad stockholders by proxy or intrust her interests to the "lords of creation." On the contrary she went in person, and when she got there she had something to say and said it and it seemed pertinent. There is not the slightest evidence that she remarked to anybody after she sat down that she thought she should die, or that she betrayed any weakness whatever. She owned stock in the road and an important question affecting her interests was under consideration, and she expressed her views, and why should not she? But St. Paul said women shouldn't speak in meeting or take their bonnets off.

David Masson, the biographer of Milton, is anxious that something shall be done to save the old house of the poet in London from utter annihilation, or at least to keep in memory the spot where it has stood so long. It is now in a badly decayed condition in York street, Westminster, the first story being used for a sheep shop of the lowest kind, and the upper stories for tenements. Milton lived in this house while Latin Secretary for the Commonwealth, and for the Lord Protector and his degenerate successor, Richard Cromwell; here his blindness came on; here he wrote some of its finest prose writings; the best of his sonnets and the first part of "Paradise Lost."

KANSAS CITY, Nov 5. The Times has returns from 75 out of the 103 legislative districts in Kansas which show the election of 19 straight Republicans and 37 opposition elected under the head of Democrats Independents and Reformers. The Democrats also elect a Senator in the only district where there was a vacancy, and also elect a District Judge in the Fort Scott district, being one of the three vacancies. The proportion of Democrats and reformers and opposition local tickets were unusually large, and the results show a larger number of such tickets elected this year than ever before.

CHURCH MATTERS.

MRS. MOULTON'S LETTER TO PLYMOUTH.

Fulton's Deacons' Statement.

The Moody and Sankey Meetings.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5. There were extraordinary proceedings in church matters in Brooklyn last night. Moody unmasked professing Christians for lack of earnestness in revival work and action of great interest was taken at Plymouth church and the Hanson Place Baptist church.

At Plymouth church a committee reported in favor of dropping from the roll of the church the name of Deacon West, saying the latter would not oppose such a proceeding as he should not attend that church any more. His name was accordingly dropped.

Mrs Moulton's Letter to the Church.

The same committee reported a recommendation that the name of Mrs Emma C. Moulton be dropped from the roll. Mrs Moulton was present, accompanied by Gen Pryor as counsel, and through him presented a letter in which she stated that the best intimation she had of any action contemplated by the church, was the announcement by one of the committee that her name was to be dropped and she protested against any such action as she had been deprived of any hearing whatever before the committee. It having been stated that her name was to be dropped on account of absenting herself from the church she replies as follows "My absence is an enforced one and is caused by the crime of adultery committed by Henry Ward Beecher, pastor of this church, with one of his parishioners, which I know to be a fact, through Mr Beecher's confessions to me, and through the confessions of Mr. Tilton and through conclusive evidence of the crime from other sources. I appear before the church in loyal obedience to the summons which I have received and I hereby declare my disposition and desire to discharge all the duties devolving on me as a member that are consistent with my knowledge of the adultery of the pastor and his false swearing in regard to it.

Very respectfully,

EMMA C. MOULTON

Dated Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 4th, 1875

The most impressive silence followed the reading of Mrs. Moulton's plea and the Moderator then put the question. A vote was taken and the name of Mrs Moulton was dropped from Plymouth church roll of membership.

It is alleged that the committee appointed by the Congregational Association of New York and Brooklyn, to inquire into the truth or falsity of the charges against Rev Henry Ward Beecher, will enter upon the discharge of its duties at once, and that this is the preliminary step toward dropping Beecher's name from the list of Congregational ministers

The Hanson Place Church—The Vote on Fulton's Resignation.

The Tribune states there was another meeting at the Hanson Place Baptist church, Brooklyn, last night, at which the board of deacons read a statement of their reasons why they would would not as professional christians work in harmony with Rev J D. Fulton, the minister of that church which contained charges of untruthfulness, unchristian conduct, behavior inconsistent with the position of a minister of God, overbearing and browbeating manner towards the officers and people of the church of being of bad repute outside of the church, of a poor character with brother ministers, of undoctrinal conduct, and not having the respect or confidence of 16 out of 18 of the officials of the church, as well as the better portion of the regular attendants of the church After a long discussion a vote was taken on the acceptance of the resignation of Mr. Fulton, which resulted in 164 in favor to 122 against This is considered only a complimentary vote from his personal partisans as the vote partook of the same characteristics as on a previous occasion, every member of real influence, including all the deacons and trustees but one, voting in favor of accepting his resignation

The Revival Meetings

WASHINGTON

A Report that is not Verified

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5. The despatch that the Grand Jury at St. Louis had found indictments against various parties, and mentioning as included in these indictments the names of General Babcock and Mr. Orville Grant, created intense excitement here and many applications from different quarters were made to the department of Justice, Treasury Department and even the Executive Mansion for information regarding the report. Attorney General Pierrepont who has been kept thoroughly advised by the United States Attorney at St Louis, as to the progress of the whiskey fraud cases in all their details and developments and received two telegrams yesterday giving the names of parties who had been indicted but in no case has any allusion been made to General Babcock or Mr. Orville Grant and it is the opinion of the Cabinet officers there have been no such indictments. Hon Bluford Wilson, Solicitor of the Treasury, makes substantially the same statements as the Attorney-General. General Babcock this morning merely remarked that he did not care to take any notice of the report unless it should be verified

MINNESOTA

The Republicans Making Growing

ST. PAUL, Nov 6. The State election returns continue to be favorable to the Republicans. As far as the State ticket is concerned the Republicans claim from 10,000 to 15,000 majority for all the State officers except Treasurer, with will probably have from 4,000 to 5,000 majority. The Legislature returns are as yet scanty but the indications appear to have gained so far that certainly the Republicans will have a majority on joint ballot. If that be so by the Republican gains, will make the Legislature very close.

FOREIGN NEWS.

GREAT BRITAIN

The Denominatory Times.

LONDON, Nov. 5. The Times financial article denounces the operations of the Co-operative Credit Bank as a scandal and disgrace to the city, strongly intimating that it was trading the public by dint of its unconquerable audacity and an unscrupulous dispensation of puffs. It fosters schemes like the Kentuck and Kansas City Railroad, which asks for a loan of $2,500,000, when it was ordered to be sold for a debt last May.

The failure of Dr Strasberg, the great railway contractor, severely threatens Russian commercial credit. Many failures have already occurred. Banks are in a state of fear, which reacts on the London money market

FRANCE.

Paquier Elected President of the Assembly.

VERSAILLES, Nov. 5 The Duke de Audiffret Pasquier was to-day elected President of the Assembly by a combination of the Left with a portion of the Right. The act is regarded as a demonstration against Bonapartism.

No Note to Turkey.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 5. It is semi-officially announced that Russia has sent no communication regarding Turkey to the signatories of the treaty of Paris. The good understanding and continued exchange of views between the powers renders such a communication unnecessary.

VEGETINE.

Circulation of the Blood.

The circulation of the blood is the life of the body, and its stoppage is death. No disease can be in the body without first being generated in the blood, and no disease can possibly be in the body if the blood is pure. Vegetine is the great blood-purifier

Scrofula,

Scrofulous Humor.

The Vegetine has cured many cases of Scrofula of five, ten and twenty years' standing, where the patient has had many physicians, tried many of the known remedies, and after trying the Vegetine, the common remark is "it acts differently, works differently, from any medicine I have ever taken." Vegetine will cleanse Scrofula from the system Try it.

Cancer,

Cancerous Humor.

With this complaint Vegetine acts differently, and works differently from any other remedy known to medical family It commences its work at the root of the disease, and the sore begins to heal as the foundation and continues gradually outward the skin, making the sore healthy from day to day, and finally the disease is eradicated from the system.

Mercurial Diseases.

The conviction is, in the public mind as well as in the medical profession, that the remedies supplied by the Vegetable Kingdom are more safe, more successful in the cure of disease than mineral medicines. Vegetine is composed of roots, barks and herbs. It is pleasant to take, and is perfectly safe to give to an infant. Do you need it? Do not hesitate to try it You will never regret it

Tutors.

DR TUTTER says "It is unnecessary for me to enumerate the diseases for which this Vegetine should be used. I know of no disease which will not admit of its use with good results. Almost in numerable complaints are caused by pollution so evident in the blood, which can be entirely expelled from the system by the use of the Vegetine When the blood is perfectly cleansed the disease rapidly yields, all pains cease, healthy action is promptly restored, and the patient is cured"

Female Weakness.

Vegetine acts directly upon the causes of these complaints. It invigorates and strengthens the whole system, acts upon the secretive organs, allays inflammation, cleanses, and cures ulceration, cures constipation, regulates the bowels, headache and pains in the back cease, in fact there is no disease or complaint where the Vegetine gives so quick relief, and is so effective in its cure, as in what is termed Female Weakness. It has never failed in one instance

Canker,

Cankerous Humors.

Vegetine will eradicate every trace of Canker or Cankerous Humor from the system. Do not leave off taking Vegetine while you are obtaining help and feeling better, but take it regularly and effect a cure of the disease The time and quantity of Vegetine to be taken to effect a cure depends upon the nature and severity of the disease

Pimples on the Face,

AND

Eruptions of the Skin.

For this complaint Vegetine is the great remedy It cleanses and purifies the blood, causing pimples, eruptions and humors to disappear, and does its work in a perfectly natural way. Reason should teach us that a bloody, rough or pimpled skin depends entirely upon an internal cause, and no outward application can ever cure the either

Salt Rheum.

Vegetine has cured many cases of Salt Rheum, and many of them of several years standing, where many other remedies have failed to effect a cure All forms of this disease occur most frequently in the spring and autumn, and are usually attended with burning, tingling and very troublesome itching, especially when the blood is in a heated con

"Tired Nature's Sweet Restorer, Balmy Sleep."—But there are times when this "Renewer of Strength" is denied us, times when our minds and bodies have been so overworked and are so worn out that we "woo the drowsy god in vain." CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, GENERAL DEBILITY.—CAUTION.—HYPOPHOSPHITES—FELLOWS' COMPOUND SYRUP OF HYPOPHOSPHITES.—As this preparation is entirely different in its combination and effects from all other remedies called Hypophosphites, the public are cautioned that the genuine has the name of FELLOWS & Co. blown on the bottle. The signature of the inventor, James I Fellows, is written with red ink across each label, and the price is $1 00 per bottle. Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites is prescribed by the first physicians in every city and town where introduced, and is a thoroughly orthodox preparation. d&w nov5

One of the greatest improvements in the practice of medicine is treating diseases of the lungs by direct application. Inhaling the vapors of Tar, by burning, or by the use of hot water, was recommended sixty years ago. By a recent invention the Solution of "Forest Tar" has been produced, for Catarrh and Consumption. No method of treatment is found so satisfactory to the physician and the patient. The "Forest Tar Book," found at the druggists' will give you the best information on this subject. d&w1w nov3

SHOWERS,

BY M. B. SHERMAN

O snow flaps, do not rise,
Because the happy eyes
That love I yet can see, now underneath you lie.
I see not your buds appear,
Each seems a frozen tear,
That never drops, and yet is never dry

Such useless tears they seem,
As in a heavy dream,
We pour about our griefs to make them grow,
Where all the lights are pale,
And all the crosses fall,
And all the flowers are underneath the snow

HARD PRESSED.

(Concluded.)

What interrupted Edgar's speech was a fierce, snarling cry, accompanied by the quick pattering of feet among the withered leaves and the snow, and then a long-drawn howling howl that seemed to issue from fifty throats, while dark objects began to glance phantom like, between the trees.

"Wolves! wolves!" cried Amiette, with a shriek of terror, but already the affrighted horses had set off at a mad gallop, swerving from side to side of the road in a manner that threatened to upset the sledge. Again there burst forth that horrid cry, and Marston exerted his skill and strength in maintaining a mastery over the snorting horses. Amiette, looking fearfully back, announced the unwelcome tidings that they were pursued.

"You must be cool, dearest one now, for both our sakes—for mine," said the young knight-man as he cast a glance at the darkness, "I am getting the snow." "You can drive well I know. Only keep the horses to the road and all will yet be well."

As the young counts took the reins, Edgar stopped for his trusty rifle and levelled it with deliberate aim at the foremost wolf now bounding far before the rest. The huge brute fell over on the crimson snow, with a yell so large and pain that was answered by the wild howling behind, and then suddenly ceased, a hideous medley of revilings succeeded, followed by a period of silence.

"Have they given up the pursuit?" asked Amiette with white lips as Marston reloaded his piece.

"No," answered the young man, shaking his head. "The creatures have not yielded as is their custom to destroy their wounded dead. It is but in my sight to shun this sight."

He did not trouble to speak more, for the terrible rout of speed between the galloping horses, wild with fear, and the ravenous savage denizens of the forest wilds, for more shots from Edgar's rifle brought down many wolves, but they were now too near and too eager to stop ravening fury, to be beaten off. The window of the road too enabled some of the leaders of the pack to gain upon the fast flying sledge, and with a rare audacity to endeavor to overhaul its sides, where Edgar plunging down the gun slashed at the fierce jaws and hairy throats with the keen blade of his hunting knife, and she cowered through with difficulty, disabling the two foremost of the assailants. The dead lightly, and slink howling away, but the wounded in the rear the clamor of the remainder of the pack drove total how on his side, the horses maintained.

"Dearest," said Amiette, "I am faint, let Edgar Marston with a groan as he cast a despairing glance along the road and found that already two of the giant pursuers were nearly abreast of the sledge.

"Alas! of all reckon is but three," resist from this, but before we cover the two miles which bring us unto safety, you dreadful wolves will drag down our horses and have us at their mercy. Yet I cannot remain; must be saved, and the wolves delayed."

He rose to his feet as he spoke, and took aim the right and left. Close to the road, on the left, was a mighty beech tree. Could he set his back to that tree, fall or cripple the first of the furious wolves, and swing himself up among the lower branches out of the reach of the others he might have yet a chance of life while the sledge would gain so much vantage ground that Amiette could be easily overtaken. Yes, desperate venture must be risked.

Hurriedly the young man kissed Amiette's cheek, and bidding her be of good heart, he leaped from the sledge to the ground and the wolves in strike the strong horses sharply with the whip and with a leaping bound between the trees, took a wide leap over the low bushwood and fell on his hands and knees at the foot of the beech tree.

"Edgar! Edgar!" cried the agonized girl, as vainly she expended her strength in the effort to rein the terrified horses to a standstill, the wind while the clamor of the exulting wolves told that they had desisted from the chase to crowd around an easy prey.

Goaded by terror the horses flew along the narrow road, which fortunately at this point of its course became straighter than it had hitherto been, and the light sledge was hurried along as if it had been a feather weight over the frozen snow. A whirl of sentiment the nights passed through the girl's brain as with reckless speed the sledge darted on farther and farther from the spot where Edgar Marston had sprung out to cut off what appeared to be inevitable death.

To one frantic Amiette multiplied a thousand fancies, sprang with a leap in the numerous able feeds, she cast a glance back at the white road now gleaming, as the sledge emerged from the woodland into the open country, in the first rays of the wintry moon.

Of the dread pursuers she now saw and heard no thing, but she shuddered as the remembrance thrust itself upon her of the probable cause of the disappearance of the wolves. Her lover—could she doubt he had put himself her safety with his own blood. These four-footed foes had been to him no mortal foes to have prevailed in the unequal contest against their numbers. She was alone, she was among strangers, and cultivated lands again out of the gloom of the forest and there in the far distance, by the moon beams glimmering on the burning copper domes of the churches, but she scarcely realized the fact of her escape so fatal was her fancy with the peril of him whom she loved.

The sound hoofs ceasing urging to the very snow in the race as snorting and grasping for breath, they dashed into the wide straggling main street of Vasilkof.

In the spacious market-place or public square of the town a crowd had collected in the midst of which the light of a number of torches fell on glistening bayonets of steel and the bright brass mountings of military accoutrements. A column of the flat capped, gray coated infantry of the Russian line was preparing to march, while a cavalry escort encompassed two or three carriages mounted on sledge-runners, and to one of which two or three horses had been harnessed. Sundry persons in authority, as their civil or military uniforms denoted were bustling to and fro, some mounted and others on foot, while the drums rolled and the trumpets of the Cossacks sent their shrill summons through the streets, as though to call the laggards who yet lingered to the muster.

"Halt, there!" Amiette called out a sentinel roughly, as the sledge that bore Amiette swept like a whirlwind across the market-place, scattering to right and left in dismay all who barred its frantic course. And then followed a babel of loud outcries of surprise, alarm, and pity; for the picture that was then presented to the gazers, in the ruddy glare of the torchlight, was not one ready to be forgotten. In the sledge, still mechanically grasping the reins, sat the terror-stricken girl, her face white and rigid, her dark hair streaming loose, for the furred hood of her mantle had fallen back, and her beautiful head was uncovered.

Among those who had been present when the sledge crossed the square and been the old Count and Countess Gallatin. They had recognized their daughter's pallid face as she was hurried past, and within a few moments the half-fainting girl was in the arms of her parents, and surrounded by friends and well-wishers, who plunged disposed to welcome her as one long thought dead.

"We were about to put on the Cossacks," the Count exclaimed, when Amiette appeared to be sensible to her mother's caresses and endearing words, with the escort with which the kindness of his Excellency the Governor had provided, hoping—but hardly daring so hope, my lambs—that you would have been spared in the first outbreak of the fury of those parts of which the news reached us but an hour ago. Troops are about to march for the scene of the revolt, but, since you are safe—though through what marvellous place of good fortune I cannot conjecture—"

"It was through no such fortune," gasped Amiette, "but—but—Yes! tell the—his gallant, noble life, Count—that I owe my own, that he gave to save me—"

"Yes, I am safe, but at what price!"

And here a darkness came before her eyes, and her voice failed, as she sank fainting into the arms of her mother; but soon, as if nerved by the recollection of her lover's danger, she roused herself to tell, in broken accents, what had occurred, to indicate the place where she left him, and to implore that rescue might be sent thither without delay.

Like wildfire she news flew through the crowd, for the whole population of Vasilkof had collected in the streets, and women wept and men grew pale at the news, while the exclamation of bystanders evinced the horror, admiration, and sympathy which Edgar Marston's intrepid self-devotion had evoked. The young English manager of the Land Bank was popular in the town, and even had he been a stranger, the deed he had done would have sufficed to raise him to the rank of a hero. But, ready and willing to render assistance as were all who heard the story, the most sanguine could not venture to express a hope that aid could arrive in time to be of service to him.

In spite of these dismal forebodings, it was determined that not an instant should be lost in carrying help to Edgar Marston, if human help could indeed avail, and about thirty gentlemen, some in sledges and others on horseback, set off at a rapid pace, escorted by twice as many of the mounted Cossacks, the Governor having decided to delay the marching of the column until some tidings should arrive as to Edgar's fate. The distance was rapidly traversed, and as the exploring part entered the forest, a wild mournful sound came afloat on the night wind.

"They are there yet, the pack of them," cried old Baron Jagellon, spurring his horse and handling his gun. "Push on and let us pepper some of their grey hides at any rate!"

But wolves are cunning as well as fierce, and when the rescuers came in sight of the great beech tree, around the foot of which the pack had gathered, growling and whining over some object at first indistinctly visible, their querulous cry changed into a note of alarm, and they huddled themselves together among the chestnuts and bushes, with their bushy tails drooping, and their bright eyes shining through the darkness like points of flame. An irregular discharge of musketry succeeded, while the Cossacks lowered their lances and dashed forward with their shrill hurrah as though charging against human foes. Neither lance nor bullet did execution among the wolves, who, forty crowed at a mesh into the recesses of the wood, while the headmost horsemen checked his wary steed, but just in time to prevent horse and rider from falling headlong into a deep but narrow pit dug at the foot of the huge beech tree.

Holy St. Sophia! of Kiew! Blessed St. Stephen of the Steppes! What wizard's work have we here? exclaimed the soldier as he wheeled his horse. "My name isn't Dimitri if I did not hear a groan from out yonder open grave!"

"Grave, forsooth!" returned Baron Jagellon hastily, dismounting, "it is a death-trap such as peasants set in likely spots, near where the honey of some of the wild bees that dwell in the hollow trees is sure to tempt bruin to the pitfall. And, as I live," he added, after listening for a moment, "there is some one down there and alive, young Marston for a thousand gold eagles!"

And which, by means of a rope hastily constructed by mixing together strap-reins, shoulder-belts, a cassock was lowered into the pit, the truth of this conjecture was confirmed for Edgar Marston, pale and exhausted but to all appearance without save for a bruise upon his right temple, was drawn forth from it. The bystanders crowded round him, but he was faint and weak, and it was not until he had swallowed a portion of the fiery cordials from the Baron's hunting-flask that he was able to speak.

Edgar's story, when he was able to tell it was a simple one, and already been anticipated by the matured sylvan experience of the Baron. When he sprang from the sledge it had been with full conviction that he was about to save Amiette's life at the sacrifice of his own. He had however made a desperate effort to reach the great beech tree in the poor hope that, by setting his back against it and making vigorous use of his hunting knife, he might gain time to grasp one of the lower boughs and draw himself up beyond the reach of the wolves. But to his consternation the treacherous surface on which he alighted and which was composed of rotten branches and dead leaves gave way beneath his feet and he was precipitated into the narrow pit below, receiving as he fell a blow on the head from a projecting stake, which stunned him for a moment and when he recovered his senses it was the furious yelping and howling of the disappointed wolves that raged round the brink of his prison and to see by the uncertain light the foaming tongues and gnashing teeth, as they bent over the edge and vainly tried to seize the prey beneath them.

The rest is told. The prejudices which had induced the Count and Countess Gallatin to object to Edgar as a suitor for their daughter's hand melted like snow in the sun when their hearts were touched by the generous self-sacrifice of the gallant young man whose praises were on every lip.—Cassell's Magazine.
